ABOUT TRAVEL INSURANCE

Purchasing travel insurance is a prudent decision for various reasons. It serves as a financial safety net, offering protection against unforeseen circumstances that could disrupt or cancel travel plans. Travel insurance typically covers a range of incidents, including trip cancellations due to emergencies, illness, or unexpected events, ensuring that the financial investment in the trip is safeguarded. Moreover, it often includes coverage for medical emergencies abroad, covering medical expenses, evacuation, and repatriation in case of illness or injury during the trip. Travel insurance can also provide coverage for lost or delayed baggage, trip interruptions, and other unexpected travel-related issues. In essence, investing in travel insurance provides peace of mind, allowing travelers to navigate their journeys with confidence, knowing that they have a financial safety net to mitigate the impact of unforeseen events, making it a wise and practical choice for any traveler.

ABOUT INCEDENTALS (CREDIT CARD HOLD)

Hotels require guests to provide a credit card upon check-in for several reasons. Firstly, it serves as a form of security for the hotel. By having a valid credit card on file, hotels can ensure that guests have a means to cover any additional charges or incidental expenses that may arise during their stay, such as room service, in-room movies, or minibar items. This helps protect the hotel against potential financial losses. Additionally, hotels may use the credit card information to guarantee the reservation, ensuring that rooms are held for the guest even if they arrive later than expected. The credit card also facilitates a smoother check-out process, allowing the hotel to efficiently settle any outstanding charges.
